EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill seeks to rename the Carmen-Santo Tomas Road immediately front the Battle of Ising Monument as "Lt. Col. Saturnino R. Silva Road" to pay tribute to his outstanding contribution to the Province of Davao del Norte during World War 2, and be remembered and cherished by the succeeding generations.

As early as 1942, the seed of the guerrilla resistance movement against the Imperial Japanese Army (IJA) was first established, organized and made operational in the "Free Davao area", now Davao del Norte and which eventually became one of the base of operation of the 10th Military District (10MD) until the liberation from Japanese rule in 1945.

The Davao guerrillas which was later designated as 130th Infantry Regiment of the 107th Division, 10th Military District figured in countless small unit ambushes and raids of IJA personnel and installations. Notably, two (2) major engagements against the IJA were recorded in the History of Mindanao Guerrillas by Col. Wendell W. Fertig, CO, 10th Military District: The Epic Battle of Tagum (10-14 November 1944); and The Battle of Ising (3-10 May 1945).

Outstanding among these gallants who resisted the Japanese occupation and who shaped the larger events of the resistance movement in the province was Lt Colonel Saturnino R. Silva 0-1300095, who was basically an OFW of that time in the United States. When the Second World War broke out, he volunteered and became a member of the 1st Reconnaissance Battalion, 1st Filipino Infantry Regiment of the US Army. He earned a commission as 2LT after undergoing the Officer Candidate School of the US Army. Thereafter, he was selected to join a group of Filipinos to train in Australia as Commando and Intelligence Specialists under the Allied Intelligence Bureau (AIB). With four (4) other commandos, they were infiltrated to the Philippines by submarine USS Narwhal in Butuan Bay on March 2, 1944 with 70 tons of materiel. Silva first served under the Headquarters of the 10 Military District as Training Officer. Eventually, he was reassigned to the 107th Division in Davao and was tasked to develop, organize, train and equip the 130th Infantry Regiment which he later commanded and became the main effort in the Battle of Ising. On May 10, 1945, during the heat of battle, then Major Silva was wounded on his left leg by a Japanese sniper.

To give recognition and remember the significant contributions of Lt Colonel Saturnino R. Silva to the World War 2 history of the Province of Davao del Norte, it is only appropriate that the Carmen-Santo Tomas Road immediately fronting the Battle of Ising Monument in the Municipality of Carmen, Province of Davao del Norte be named after him.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
