EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
Third Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 10557

Introduced by Hon. John Marvin “Yul Servo” C. Nieto

EXPLANATORY NOTE

We, as a nation, have always been proud of our history. It is not only because we have National heroes in the likes of Jose Rizal, Juan Luna, Gabriella Silang or Melchora Aquino, all of whom, have significantly contributed to the freedom and independence we so dearly treasure and relish. One national hero stands out from all the rest, because he had started an armed revolution that sparked the fight in our forefathers, a revolution that has produced aforementioned heroes.

Aside from teaching our rich history to our constituents through our educational institutions. Museums play a critical role in protecting history and local culture through its objective of preservation and proper documentation, it displays an alternative perspective in our history. Museums have a way of educating its participants in a way that classrooms and textbooks cannot do because it allows each individual to provide oneself with his or her own interpretation of the facts in front of him.

National heroes’ museums provide learned and academic institutions for the Filipino people as these museums are established to collect, study and preserve the confiscated documents and memorabilia of the national heroes and present them to the general public. Heroes such as Emilio Aguinaldo, and Marcello H. Del Pilar, Juan Luna, Padre Jose Burgos are among several of our national heroes who have an existing museum solely dedicated for them in their respective birthplaces, while Dr. Jose Rizal has several museums in Dapitan, Fort Santiago, however definitely in his birthplace in Calamba has also his own museum.
Though some often believe that the Museo ng Paglilitis ni Andres Bonifacio in Marogondon, Cavite and Museo ng Katipunan in Pinaglabanan, San Juan City and is Andres Bonifacio’s museum, it is far from the truth as it is for all Katipuneros. Mere recognition of Bonifacio’s contributions to the revolution and liberation is not enough, because compared to other national heroes, his contributions are of significant importance but portrayal of such recognition and honor is lacking.

The establishment of a museum solely dedicated to Andres Bonifacio will significantly aid the development of political and historical thought in the Philippines inasmuch as it will create a new narrative and perspective on his life and legacy. It is high time that we fill the gap in the limited knowledge that we have about Andres Bonifacio, that he was a self-educated man with great dreams and hopes for a country that was once captured by the Spain army. Andres Bonifacio is more than the first man that started the armed revolution, rather, he was the man that sparked such strong feelings of nationalism and patriotism that have given strength to our forefathers to fight for the independence that we so dearly hold and protect today.

This Act seeks to urge the national government through the National Historical Commission of the Philippines (NHCP) to establish Andres Bonifacio’s own museum in his hometown in Manila City. It is only right that we finally honor and recognize the man who has started a revolution that has forever changed the course of our history. A museum on his life, works and until his unfortunate, politically driven death is enough cause to establish such in order to further educate the public outside of the four walls of the classroom. The Filipino youth who will come to know Andres Bonifacio in this way will know our true history and instill in them a newfound sense of nationalism and patriotism through the life of Andres Bonifacio displayed in his own museum.

Approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
