

Republic of the Philippines
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Quezon City, Metro Manila

NINETEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 3458

Introduced by Representative WOWO FORTES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Since 2003, the Community-Driven Development (CDD) approach has been implemented and championed by the Kapit-bisig Laban sa Kahirapan - Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services (KALAHI-CIDSS) Program of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD).

The CDD approach is an internationally recognized empowerment strategy that relies on community participation to achieve significant and lasting development. Citizens are treated as partners in the development process by allowing community members to identify and prioritize community issues and problems. Further, CDD involves the community in the implementation, management, and operation and maintenance of community-identified solutions to their prioritized problems. Through this approach, communities are empowered to take part and claim ownership of the government's community-based programs, activities and projects (PAPs).

By institutionalizing the CDD approach, we can give the people more power to chart their own paths, in line with the true intent and spirit of devolution. CDD institutionalization will provide an enabling policy to achieve genuine community empowerment by enhancing capacities for community participation especially in poor, vulnerable, disadvantaged, and marginalized communities.

CDD institutionalization also provides a national strategy and mechanism to ensure inclusive and sustainable growth by increasing community participation and improving government transparency and accountability especially in the implementation of community-based PPAs.

In the context of devolution, CDD institutionalization reinforces the provisions of the Local Government Code. Currently, community participation in local government is limited to representation in local development councils and local special bodies. As a consequence, people who are not members of civil society organizations, the academe, or other people's organizations are not given representation.

The CDD approach remedies this by offering ready and available technologies that, through decades of implementation, have proven effective in stirring active and long-lasting citizen participation that leads to local development.

CDD's principles of participation, transparency, and accountability has a positive relationship with poverty alleviation and inclusive and sustainable growth. Through the CDD approach, KALAHI-CIDSS and the DSWD improved access to basic social services in some of the poorest and most marginalized communities in the country. Through community participation, high-quality infrastructures were established within or below planned costs. As an added benefit, CDD also improved the capabilities of community members and volunteers as their involvement required training on sound financial management and procurement.

By institutionalizing the CDD approach to ensure inclusive growth and social protection, the government can build on and perpetuate the gains of CDD in local development and nation-building.

In view of the foregoing considerations, approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
